1. Decide how large you want your blanket to be. A standard throw blanket is approx. 50â?³Â• x 60â?³Â•. Add in 3.5â?³Â• to each side for the fringe. This will make the total size you need to cut for the blanket 57â?³Â• x 67â?³Â•. You could even just use the full 2 yard length for an extra-long blanket.
2. Cut off the sewn selvage edges.

3. Sew a seam 3.5â?³Â• in from each edge. You can use a straight seam or a zigzag seam. We just want to keep the fringe from fraying too far in on the blanket, and make a marker so we know when to stop removing threads.

4. Take a needle and start pulling away the threads in the blanket on the edges. Youâ??ll start seeing your fringe develop.

Once youâ??ve created your fringe, youâ??re done! You can do a couple tack stitches at the corners to secure the threading on the blanket if youâ??d like.

To get this dual-toned fringe, use our Mix Natural color! The threads are woven with a different color on each side, giving it a dual tone. We have a few other dual toned fabrics in the Yarn Dye section.
